I have an init function which sets up some flags and a boolean variable to indicate if a unit was spawned or not. When the init function is run for the first time, the flags and variable are set, but when I later spawn another unit, the flags and variable are not set. It would seem that a static variable initialized in the same way would behave the same. Why doesn't this work? class Unit { public: static bool spawned; static Unit() { spawned = false; } static void Init() {
